American Laundry Products acquires Clenacorp.

American Laundry Products, Inc. North Augusta, SC, USA a division of Andrew Industries Group headquartered in Altham, England is very pleased to announce it has acquired the business and certain assets of Clenacorp Inc., San Carlos, CA effective January 1, 2017.

Clenacorp, established in 1947, formulates and manufactures a complete line of paste and liquid lubricants, cleaners, Karagami Flake Wax, as well as a complete line of guide tapes, beltings and accessories for flatwork ironers and folders. These products are supplied to the commercial laundry and dry cleaner supply industries via original equipment manufacturers and through distributors.

American Laundry Products, Inc. is a manufacturer of pads, covers and accessories for flatwork ironers, as well as feed & folder belts. Our products are supplied exclusively to distributors and original equipment manufacturers.

According to Gene Williams, President of American Laundry Products, Inc. "Clenacorp Inc. has an excellent reputation in our industry of offering high quality products coupled with superior customer service. These attributes align perfectly with our core mission. There is a lot of synergy between our two companies and I am looking forward to working very closely with the Clenacorp team and their customers over the next several months as we transition their business into American Laundry Products, Inc. This acquisition will also allow us to broaden our product portfolio offerings to our existing customers as well as to provide new export opportunities in service to our global laundry division."
